Nestled in the mountains of Jalisco, Mexico there lies a small town called Oconahua. With cobblestone roads, church bells and horses, the magic of the land whispers ancient stories of witches and wizards. This short film finds us in the middle of a yearly harvest festival in honor of Archangel Michael, a centuries-long tradition. Within the layers of this Catholic celebration, the ancient knowledge of the Indigenous shines through - revealing ancient medicine. The premiere is in collaboration with West of Ivy and Women's Film Club
